About Us:

The Wilton Police department is comprised of a Police Chief and six Iowa Law Enforcement Academy (ILEA) certified police officers. Several of our officers bring extensive experience from other larger area agencies as well as the military, and other highly specialized areas of training. Our officers continue to train and grow regularly in various areas specific to law enforcement, with an emphasis on mental health, de-escalation techniques, and tactical response.

We maintain modern and well-equipped patrol vehicles and utilize all available resources while working as a unit in crime scene investigations, and critical incident management.

In cooperation with the Wilton School district, the Wilton Police Department employs a full time Certified School Resource Officer (SRO) to be in the school building while school is in session and for other significant school events. Wilton officers regularly spend time in and around the school and patrolling high school events, our focus is on establishing and maintaining connections with area youth to promote positive relationships.

The Chief of Police, SRO and school administrators regularly share information and discuss issues of mutual concern.

Community Oriented Policing:

The Wilton Police Department believes in collaborative efforts and partnerships with all area law enforcement agencies, fire departments, EMS services, Emergency Management, mental health advocacy programs and the residents of our community.

Our primary focus will always be to guard life, property, and your constitutional rights while pursuing justice with compassion and respect for all our citizens. It's through these collaborative efforts that we can better find permanent solutions to problems and issues in our community rather than merely providing a short-term law-enforcement response, and better ensure a safe and secure community.
